

Healthy obsession

AN OBSESSION about health in all aspects of dairy farming, from the people running dairy farms to the animals and pastures, will be the theme at this year's Dairy Research Foundation symposium in Camden, NSW, on September 8 and 9.

Free, on-the-spot health checks will be offered to those attending by the National Centre for Farmer Health.

The two-day program will also feature local and overseas speakers and practical reports from Hunter Valley dairy farmers using Complementary Forage Systems developed by the FutureDairy team.

Delegates will also visit historic Camden Park where a commercial dairy operates on the site first settled by John and Elizabeth Macarthur in the 19th century.
