Don't miss the opportunity to sow the seeds of farmer health

If you are passionate about the health, well-being and safety of farmers, agricultural workers and their families, make sure that you are at the Hamilton Performing Arts Centre, 17 – 19 September 2012. In 2010 we 'Opened the Gates on Farmer Health' and conference delegates developed and adopted the Hamilton Charter for Farmer Health. In 2012 we are 'Sowing the Seeds of Farmer Health' and aim to further develop cross-sector relationships and alliances to bring about better and broader understanding of agricultural health, well-being and safety. At the conference you will:

- ✓ Share and celebrate the success of your programs already working with farming families and agricultural workers
- ✓ Become empowered to understand and improve the health impacts of agricultural production
- ✓ Understand how to broaden the identity of farmers and agricultural workers beyond the 'life is work ethos'
- ✓ Discover the importance of seasonal and biological cycles in farming to enable the delivery of appropriate and quality 'health' programs
- ✓ Gain skills in strengthening relationships across sectors and within sectors
- ✓ Participate, contribute and view fabulous photographic images celebrating rural life

14 keynote speakers – biosecurity hypothetical - concurrent sessions - photo competition - trade displays - networking opportunities
